

General requirements for graduate degrees

A degree is earned only after payment of all tuition, fees and other charges to the university and after a student has fulfilled all requirements of the degree program including final submission of a successfully defended and approved dissertation, thesis, capstone summary or other final project summary (if required). Each graduate program in the School of Medicine has specific curricular requirements as described in the Bulletin.

Last updated: 2019.10